Irish Seaman, Stranded, Asks Aid of Embassy

Ship Leaves John Connelly in North Carolina, and He Walks to Capital—Will Be Sent Home To-day.

After trudging footsore and weary over frozen roads from Wilmington, N. C., where he had been accidentally left by the good ship Hillman six weeks before, John Connelly, forty years old, a marine fireman on the vessel, and a native of Tyrone, Ireland, rang the door bell at the British Embassy yesterday afternoon and requested assistance from the Ambassador.

For twenty-three years the Irish fireman has followed the sea for a livelihood. Most of his nautical experience has been confined to British waters. Six weeks ago the Hillman touched the American coast at Wilmington, N. C. On the day that the vessel was to sail the Irish fireman decided to take a final tour of the town. When Connelly returned to the wharf the vessel had left. Connelly had been left behind in America without a cent, without a friend, and without prospect of employment. He thought of Ellen, his wife, whom he had left behind in Antrim, Ireland. His thought of his twenty-three-year-old son, Charles, and Margaret, his pretty nineteen-year-old daughter.

For almost two weeks he roamed through the streets, seeking employment. He attempted to board one of the sailing vessels, but the crews were complete. He inquired of strangers where the British Ambassador might be found, and he was told the official lived in Washington. The marine fireman was determined to make the journey. He started out just four weeks ago.

Tired, hungry, and cold, he traveled over the frozen roads through wild mountain regions, and over the bleak open moors. At farmhouses along the route he stopped to chop enough wood for a night's lodging and a scanty meal. Yesterday morning Connelly entered the city. He was weary and almost exhausted, but he thought of Ellen and the children, and he was happy. He hurried to the British Embassy and told his woeful tale to officials there.

Arrangements were made immediately for the transportation of Connelly to Philadelphia, where he will book with some vessel bound for Ireland. The seaman spent last night at the municipal lodging house, where he has interested the inmates with tales of the sea. At 6 o'clock this morning he will leave for Philadelphia.

SOCIETY LEADERS

COME TO PARTING

Mrs. Hemmick's Action in Removing Show from Playhouse Intensifies Widening Gulf.

Despite the efforts of both sides to smooth over the situation, the removal from the Playhouse of Mrs. Hemmick's new play, "The Love of Echo," is taken to mean a definite break between her and Preston Gibson, the moving spirit in the organization of the Playhouse.

It has been rumored for some time that relations between Mrs. Hemmick and Mr. Gibson became strained following the removal from the Playhouse of the historical tableaux being given there. Hemmick presented last December at Baucuser's.

A truce was effected, it is said, and as a result Mrs. Hemmick agreed to produce at the Playhouse her new play, "The Love of Echo."

Cards were issued stating that "The Love of Echo" would be given "for the benefit of the Playhouse and the Playhouse," it being the agreement to divide the receipts. Mr. Gibson is understood to have objected to this notice on the ground that the Playhouse was in sore financial straits. As a result of the ensuing disagreement, it was decided to produce the play at one of the local theaters, the purpose being given that the Playhouse would not be large enough to accommodate the crowds.

INTRUDER SHOT, FLEES.

No trace found of man who entered Angela's home.

No trace has been found of the colored man who was the target for three revolver shots about 4 o'clock yesterday morning when he was discovered in the home of H. B. Angelo, of Dominican Heights, Va.

Angelo heard a noise on the first floor and descended with a revolver to discover a colored intruder searching the rooms. Before Angelo could grapple with the burglar the man turned and ran from the house.

Three shots followed him from Angelo's revolver, and it is believed one of the shots took effect. Constable H. H. H. made a search of the vicinity without finding a trace of the supposedly wounded man. His identity is known and an arrest is expected. Angelo is an employee of the H. B. Angelo Company, 1111 Fourteenth street.

CAPITAL LABOR

TRUCE DECLARED

over the purpose or not, but if it cannot, somebody will, and if nobody else, it will, because that is one of the things that had to come. I thoroughly agree with President Lee's suggestion about the uniformity of the law. The dual system of government which we have in this country has various benefits and various disadvantages, and one of them is the lack of uniformity in the laws on subjects where they ought to be uniform. There ought to be a uniform law on commercial paper, on assignments, on divorces.

A polished address was delivered by President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, of the University of California.

Key to the Problem.

"The key to the problem confronting us is that we must get one man, and one set of men, to look out of the skull and through the eyes of the other fellow," said Mr. Wheeler. "All the rate is human, and it is going to stay human. This means that it is feasible.

"The only way to run a popular government is by optimism. That is the difference which separates a popular government from a mechanical one. We call hope, where would we emerge amid the stress and strain of life? We speak of the twentieth century as being distinctly a mechanical age; yet there are certain features of it which never are and never can be mechanical.

"The processes of production and distribution never can be made mechanical. It is impossible to regulate our life by raw principles. That is settled. The human element always enters, and it is that which is the hope and the safety of the race. Amid our squabbles and entanglements we must all remember that men are human, and that by appealing to their human side much of the misery and conflict of the age can be avoided.

Mrs. Hammond Reports.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, chairman of the woman's section of the Civic Federation, made a brief report of the year's work.

"Much progress has been made in the direction of conciliation. The time has come when we must recognize the woman worker as a factor in our industrial life, and all women should enter into the task of aiding their sisters who are compelled to toil. There are nearly ten million women workers in the country.

"Mrs. Hammond strikes the nail exactly on the head when she says that the present situation in Lawrence is a vivid illustration of misunderstanding existing between capitalists and wage-earners. To create a clearer conception of the varying points of view, to disseminate a clearer understanding of the difficulties which each side labors under, is to eliminate nearly all the danger of strikes and lockouts.

Session in Afternoon.

John Hays Hammond in his address tonight the idea that the protective tariff had any considerable effect on the country of living. The afternoon session of the federation.

"There is little question that the tariff has been overemphasized as a factor in our social and industrial welfare," said Mr. Hammond. "It is a question of the greatest importance, and should be handled only in the most scientific manner. I think it should be taken out of the hands of the politicians and placed in the hands of the scientists. But it is the common habit nowadays to attribute any economic evil which presents itself to the fact that we have a high protective tariff.

"The worst of the evil of living is increasing throughout the world, in free trade countries as well as in those protected by a protective or a revenue tariff. The worst of the evil of living is increasing throughout the world, in free trade countries as well as in those protected by a protective or a revenue tariff. The worst of the evil of living is increasing throughout the world, in free trade countries as well as in those protected by a protective or a revenue tariff.

Believes in Purpose.

"I believe in the purposes of the National Civic Federation, and that it is doing much to advance the cause of better relations between employer and employee," Secretary MacVagh, in speaking of government pensioners, said: "A real force is now behind civil pensions. The whole trouble has been that there is no one behind Congress or the executive departments on this question. We are open to suspect that the fact that Washington has no votes to cast is responsible for the lack of interest in this movement."

The federation adopted resolutions giving its support and endorsement to a workmen's compensation bill, outlined in a recent message of the President's. August Belmont opened the session yesterday morning. Senator George Sutherland, H. E. Willis, Paul E. Page, Louis E. Schram, John Calder, and A. C. Pratt were among the speakers.

BOW IN CHURCH AT END.

Suit Against Colored Pastor Before Court Withdrawn.

The factional fight at Vermont Avenue Colored Church was ended yesterday afternoon, when Attorney Woodward, counsel for the plaintiffs in the suit of James H. Winslow, Hill, and others against Rev. James H. Willis, pastor of the church and Kirkridge Hawkins, discontinued the cause before Judge Gould. The case was brought on a bill of rights.

Justice Wright had previously quashed the suit. The suit was filed by Winslow and his followers for the purpose of restraining Rev. Mr. Willis from acting as pastor. The petition also sought to restrain the deacons and the trustees from serving. The argument of the plaintiffs was that Willis and the deacons and trustees were illegally elected. Willis had a plurality of 1,000 votes, but it was maintained by the plaintiffs that the ballot box was stuffed.

Attorneys Birney, Woodward, Worthington, and Lee appeared for the plaintiffs, while the defendants were represented by Attorneys Thomas L. Jones, Siddons, and Richardson. The factional fight is now settled legally, with the exception of the case which is now pending in the Police Court as the result of a free-for-all fight in the sanctuary early one morning several weeks ago.

C. OF C. SECRETARY TO HAVE HELPER

Office of Assistant Secretary Created Upon Membership Committee's Recommendation.

The appointment of an assistant to aid Secretary Thomas Grant with the duties of his office was authorized by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce last night.

This action was the outcome of a recommendation of the membership committee that a competent membership solicitor be employed. The directors were opposed to the employment of a solicitor, maintaining that the efforts of the membership committee, if it was deemed advisable, however, to employ an assistant secretary, whose duties will include the handling of many details in connection with the business of the membership committee.

After considerable discussion the board voted to see Edward Meyer to Chicago to appear before a meeting of the executive committee of the American Bowling Congress, to be held there Friday morning, to urge the selection of Washington as the next meeting place of the organization.

Following addresses by Gen. Hilary A. Herbert and G. Grosvonts Daws, a committee of five was appointed to co-operate with a similar committee of the Board of Trade in the preparation of the annual convention of the delegates of the Southern Association of the United States of America, to be held here in November.

George S. Smith, formerly president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, urged the Chamber to assist in the entertainment of the foreign delegates to the congress of the International Chambers of Commerce, to be held in Boston in September. The foreign delegates will visit Washington and about ten other cities at the conclusion of the congress. The matter was referred to a subcommittee for consideration.

Prof. G. G. Hammer urged that the Chamber give its endorsement to and appropriate a portion of a guarantee fund for a spring music festival to be held here in May. The matter was referred to a subcommittee, with instructions to investigate the merits of the proposed celebration.

Called to New York.

Albert Schulz, a member of the board of directors of the Chamber, who was recently appointed to the board of governors of the National Board of Trade, with the Chamber of Commerce is at Albany. He was called to New York yesterday to attend an executive session of the governing board of the national trade organization. It is understood that the board was called together to discuss the proposition of President Taft for the formation of a national commercial organization.

BEST CIVIL WAR STORY
FOR HERALD READERS

Croscup's History Far Surpasses Any Other in Accounting Thrilling Details of That Time.

Fifty years ago the nation was convulsed by civil war, which to-day we can study calmly and dispassionately. Many histories of the war and of other periods in our national life have appeared, but none gives the entire story of our country so clearly and briefly as the new Croscup's United States History, which is now offered as a premium to readers of The Washington Herald.

It would be quite impossible to give a more complete account of the progress of the war, fifty years ago this year, than is this brief summary from Croscup's, starting with the capture of Fort Henry and Donelson, near the border of Tennessee and Kentucky. This was accomplished by Gen. Grant after his famous campaign for "unconditional surrender." The result followed the occupation of Nashville, Tenn., by Gen. Grant toward the
